Chapter 1 by Story Wars

So many people wore uniforms. So many people wore the blue and white stripes. So many people were no more than a number in the eye of their captors.

So many people died. Yet, in the words of Joseph Stalin, "The death of one man is a tragedy, the death of millions is a statistic."

They were more than the number on their uniforms. They were more than just a statistic. Don't condemn the dead to a dreary lesson in history. These people were more than just a number.

Don't forget them.
